

REENTRY SERVICES FOR U.S. VETERANS

GEO Reentry Services has extensive experience working with populations returning from highly structured environments, such as jail or prison, to life back in the community. The challenges are similar to those a veteran experiences upon release from a military environment. Veterans may face mental health and substance use issues, PTSD, depression, unemployment, strained family relationships, and homelessness. As a result, more and more veterans find themselves in the criminal justice system. Veterans Treatment Courts were created in part to connect veterans to services that can help.

GEO Reentry has been operating and managing reentry centers across the country for over 40 years. The services and programs provided directly address criminogenic needs and are tailored for individual participants with measurable outcomes, successful community transition, and recidivism reduction.

Accountability, Self-sufficiency, & Behavior Change Services

GEO Reentry delivers programming focused on improving employment skills, as obtaining sustainable employment is a key factor in breaking the cycles of homelessness and crime. Other areas of focus include supporting educational needs and addressing substance use issues, domestic violence or family issues, homelessness, anger management, and mental health challenges.
